Course Aims and Objectives

The final-year project is the largest and most substantial single piece of work you will be assigned throughout your Bachelor's degree. It offers you the opportunity to combine the knowledge you gained from a large number of courses and put to practice what you have learned. More specifically, the final year project gives you a chance to show your competence in:

- choosing a topic of your interest in the area of Multimedia
- carrying out a serious piece of work successfully
- working independently, solving problems, making decisions and justifying them
- making good use of your time and setting your priorities intelligently
- communicating your ideas to others

The project will consist of designing and implementing a substantial piece of software (Multimedia application) and writing a dissertation.

Teaching Methods

The course is delivered through individual meetings and guidance.
